“Whether you’re starting out in your career, you’re mid-career or you’re the head of an organization, you never stop learning. We’re all students in this life. So find a good mentor.”

UC President Janet Napolitano reminds us of the value of mentorship in her recent LinkedIn article “How mentoring propelled my career forward — and can do the same for you.”

Connect with your Mentor/Mentee
Try one of these 3 activities during your next meeting:

1. Mentee assignment: Write down the picture of a perfect week. What are you doing, where are you living, how do people talk about you? Discuss these discoveries with your mentor and what you can learn/apply from them.
2. Mentors, help your mentees develop an “Elevator Speech.”
3. Take a walk together around the lagoon and discuss what work-life satisfaction means to each of you.
